Jamie Foxx has spoken publicly about how he rescued a man from a burning vehicle after it crashed right outside his luxury home but insisted he is not a hero.

The Oscar-winning actor told local LA news reporters that he just did what he had to do when he rushed to the aid of a driver trapped inside his pick up truck that was already on fire.

'I don't think of it as heroic,' he told NBC4.

Real life action man: Jamie Foxx met with local news reporters outside his luxury home on Tuesday and described how he rescued a man from a fiery wreck outside his front gates on Monday night

Fiery wreck: A 32-year-old man was trapped inside his rolled over pickup truck after crashing on the rural road near Los Angeles and it was already on fire when help arrived on scene

Foxx, 48, and another man used EMT scissors to break the truck's window and then, Foxx told ABC7, 'I climbed in and I try to hit his seat belt but he's huddled over it so I grab the scissors and cut the seatbelt.'

'We cut it off from his neck and then, as the flames do come into the cabin, I lean back,' the Ray star added.

'I think what (the seatbelt) did, it hit his legs which made him extend and when he extends, he extends out of the cabin. We pull him out and as we pull him out, within five seconds later, the truck goes up.'

The Hollywood star revealed to LA station NBC4 that as he pulled the man from the wreckage, he

Ventura County firefighters and paramedics arrived on scene and the victim, named by law enforcement as Brett Kyle, 32, of Newbury Park, was transported to the Los Robles Hospital and Medical Center in nearby Thousand Oaks.

He was found to have a broken collarbone and a punctured lung and remained in the hospital Tuesday night.

The CHP says he has been charged with DUI.

From the hospital, Kyle spoke with NBC 4 to express his gratitude towards Foxx, who he says he didn't recognize in the chaos.

'They cut me out of the seatbelt,' Kyle said. 'I didn't know who it was.'

I have to respectfully disagree with Jamie Foxx, as I do think he IS a hero - and a classy man. His actions were extremely brave. What's maddening is that the driver that Mr. Foxx endangered his life for was drunk.

Sean G., Portland, United States, about an hour ago

My thoughts exactly. He selflessly endangered his own life to rescue a man who selfishly endangered the lives of others. I hope that, while Kyle ruminates in the hospital over Foxx's actions, he will reflect upon his own.

Never heard or seen Jamie ever expressing hatred for white people. He's always a class act and I say bravo Jamie you are a hero!! The guy he pulled from the burning wreck needs to reflect on why he was saved and do something good with himself besides driving while intoxicated.
